LAFAYETTE TONIGHT

Boys' Team Plays St. Joseph Five, Who Were Runners-Up for 1922 Championship.

The Maryville girls defeated the Burlington Junction team by the score of 11 to 7, last night in the high school gym. The game was close and exciting and it kept the spectators on tiptoe from start to finish. A good crowd attended, in spite of the bad weather.

Maryville started the scoring with a field goal, and held the lead till the final whistle. However, the margain was never a safe one, and several times it looked as if the visitors were about to win. All of the girls on both teams played well, and there were no individual stars. The game was clean, as no one was taken out on personal fouls.

The first half ended with the score standing 9 to 3 in favor of Maryville. Dorothy Dow made three field goals and a free throw, and Laura Margaret Raines made two free throws for Maryville, during the first half. Jones of Burlington Junction made a field goal and a free throw. During the second half, Raines made the only field goal for Maryville, and Jones and Edwards each scored a field goal for Burlington Junction.

Loren Egley was referee. J. R. Hann and C. F. Ross are the coaches the Burlington Junction team.

The Maryville boys play the Lafayette team, tonight. The boys have been practicing hard this week, but it is the opinion of coach Lawrence they will have to work hard to beat Lafayette. Maryville battled Lafayette in the finals for the Northwest Missouri championship last spring and defeated for them by a small margin. The locals have won both of their games so far this year, and a strong effort will be made tonight to keep slate clean.

Brink, official weather observer, said that the mercury registered six below zero at that time this morning. It began snowing late yesterday afternoon accompanied by a high northwest wind. Not much snow fell, however, and it cleared off about 10 o'clock, the wind going down about the same time. It was an ideal groundhog day.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Winter staged a sudden "comeback" throughout the West and Northwest last night. Sharp drops in the temperature were recorded in the upper Great Lakes region, and St. Paul and Minneapolis shivered through temperature ranging from 20 to 25 below zero.

The sharp decline in the mercury was recorded throughout Minnesota, the Dakotas, Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri. In some states snow was reported. At Denver it dropped 38 degrees in twenty-four hours going to the low point of 8 below. At Kansas City it was hovering around the zero point. Heavier snow storms accompanied the drops in Western Iowa and Nebraska.

A NEW WAR LOOMS SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

EX-PREMIER DECLARES EUROPEAN OUTLOOK BAD.

GERMANY IN BAD SHAPE

Is Opinion of Veteran Statesman—Ruhr Occupation a Gross Folly.

Plymouth, England, Feb. 3—The possibility of a new war as the outcome of the French siezure of the Ruhr, was sounded by ex-Premier David Lloyd George on his arrival from Spain today. Trouble is being laid up for the whole world, he added.

Immediately after landing, he called for the back files of the newspapers. He plunged into their contents and carefully studied them, especially the events in Central Europe. In speaking of the situation to a correspondent of the International News Serviec, this veteran statesman declared:

"The European outlook is bad, unquestionably bad. It is difficult to say whether or not, war will be the outcome. Germany, economically and politically, is in a bad way. The occupation of the Ruhr by the French, was the grossest folly It was the wrong way to approach the problem, but the surest way not to get any reparation payments and to lay up a store of trouble of war possibilities, which I do not care to contemplate."

GREAT BRITAIN AUGMENTS HER NEAR EAST FORCES

Marines, Infantry and Ammunition Sent There Today—Allies Refuse Mosul Plebisite

Malta, Feb. 3.—Great Britain is reinforcing her troops in the near East on the eve of the expiration of the time for the Angora government to accept or reject the terms of the peace treaty. Two additional warships carrying large supplies of ammunition, and reinforcements of British marines and infantrymen, sailed today for the fortress Chanak, on the narrows of the Dardanelles.

Lausanne, Feb. 3.—The allied powers made farther concessions to the Angora government today in an effort to get Turkey to accept the peace terms.

Turkey was allowed to maintain as many troops in Thrace as she sees fits. The allies, however, refused to agree to a plebisite for Mosul to determine whether or not the rich oil fields would be united with Turkey or allowed to remain a part of the Kingdom of Irak. The fight against the Turkish acquisition of Mosul has been led by Great Britain.

SALARY OF P. A. IS STILL A QUESTION

WILL AWAIT DECISION OF HIGHER COURT IN CASE

STATEMENT BY CURL

Presented His Bill for $208.33 but Stated it Was Not a Waiver of Any Additional Amount

There still seems to be some question as to the salary of the prosecuting attorney. Dr. O. L. Curl, prosecuting attorney, filed his salary bill this morning with County Clerk Fred Smith for the month of January for $208.33, with a statement there was some question as to what his salary is.

The statement on the bill follows:

"Inasmuch as the law provides a penalty for accepting an amount other than the salary fixed by law, and inasmuch as there is a question as to what the salary is as fixed by law for the prosecuting attorney and further as to the constitutionality of the 1921 act relative thereto, it is not intended that the presentation of this bill shall be understood as a waiver of any additional amount which may be found due according to law upon the determination of the matter by the courts."

Former Prosecuting Attorney Charles F. McCaffrey sued the county court for additional salary of $5,000 for the two years of his term ending December 31, 1922, and obtained a verdict in the circuit court here. An appeal was granted and the case will go up to the supreme court.

If the 1921 act is held to be unconstitutional, the salary of Dr. Curl for his term will be at the rate of $5,000 a year. If the law is upheld by the supreme court, then his salary will be $2,500.

BEARCATS LOSE GAME TO PANTHERS-SCORE, 32-16

S. T. C. Cagers Trail 2 to 15 at End of First Period—Game Was Roughly Played.

The State Teachers College basketball team lost to the Drury Panthers last night on the Drury court at Springfield by a score of 16 to 32. The mountainers just naturally had a better basketball team than the Bearcats and playing on their own court gave them an advantage.

The score at the end of the half was 15 to 2 in favor of Drury. In the second half the Bearcats came back stronger and tallied fourteen points while the Panthers added seventeen points to their score.

Ellis, guard on the Maryville team, suffered a strained back in the second half and was replaced by Wilson, who played a nice game.

The game was rather rough and Referee Fred Williams made a very weak effort to cut out the roughness. After the game he went up to "Hickory" Leech, the Bearcat captain, and said: "Got any bruises or scratches?"

To which Leech replied:

"Oh, no more than a person would get in a moderately rough football game."

The team returned to Maryville on the noon Burlington train today.

The line-up that started the game was Leech and Miller, forwards; Bloomfield, center; Kirby and Ellis, guards. Haun was substituted for Bloomfield who strained his ankle and Wilson went in for Ellis when he was injured.

The Bearcats now have four straight games to be played in Maryville. The first will be next Friday with Missouri Valley College. On the Monday following that game Missouri Wesleyan will come to Maryville and two days later the strong Culver-Stockton quintet will be here for a game. Then on February 20 the Kirksville teachers will come to Maryville.

On February 27 the Bearcats will go to Tarkio for a game and a night later Tarkio will come here for the final game of the season.

The game will be refereed by Thomas of Tarkio and will start at 8 o'clock.

FRENCH ANNOUNCE A BLOODLESS VICTORY

OFFICIALS SAY GERMAN RESISTENCE IS BROKEN.

"GERMANY WILL PAY"

Declares Eco D' Paris in Editorial, for Everything She Obtains from the Ruhr.

Paris, Feb. 3.—German resistence has been broken in the Rhineland and the Ruhr, and France has won a bloodless victory of the first magnitude, according to officialdom and press stories here today.

The calling off of the German railroad strike is regarded by authorities as the first step of the Germans to back down all along the line. The railroad strike has been regarded as the backbone of the German passive resistence.

The Echo D' Paris, in its issue, revealed that Germany's note to the interallied reparation commission pratested the allies decision of January 26 holding Germany in voluntary default of all payments and deliveries under the terms of the Versailles treaty. The note pointed out that the "commission was obligated to study Germany's resources and capacity for payments" before making a decision.

The same newspaper quoted a British diplomat as saying, "Germany has hoisted the white flag." Editorially, the Echo D' Paris declared, "The French will hold onto what they have siezed until everything owed them by Germany is paid." "Germany will pay,' it went on to say, "For everything she obtains from the Ruhr."

STATE TROOPS GO TO STRIKE SCENE

MARTIAL LAW MAY BE DECLARED AT COVINGTON, KY.

2 COMPANIES OF TROOPS

Trouble Started Two Weeks Ago When Non-Union Railmen's Hotel Is Dynamited.

Covington, Ky., Feb. 3.—Two additional companies of state troops arrived here at noon today to augment the detachment of troops that were posted throughout the city early this morning. One machine gun company and one company of infantry were placed at stragetic places to meet any emergencies that may arise. Officers have threatened martial law at the slightest provocation.

The trouble started more than two weeks ago when a building in which non-union workers of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad was staying, was dynamited and several persons injured.

Covington, Ky., Feb. 3. — National guardsmen arrived here early today to patrol the city following the urgent request by Mayor Gilliam and Sheriff Young of Whitley County, to Governor Morrow, that the situation was out of their control.

The appeal for troops is the direct result of the dynamiting of a hotel and a street battle a few days ago in which two men were killed. A detachment of twenty-five men of Company B, at London, Ky., are on duty here and the remainder of the company is held awaiting orders at the London armory. The immediate cause of sending the guardsmen is the tense situation following the shooting of the two men and the blowing up of a hotel, being occupied by strikers of the Louisville and Nashville railroad. Officials say that Jess Barker and his brother, J. S. Barker, resisted arrest in connection with the shooting.

Whitely County, long famous for its "bad men," has been the center of disturbances throughout the strike of shopmen. While the town was quiet this morning, officers expressed their fear of an outbreak. Railroad officials are silent, but alert.

THE GROUNDHOG SUPERSTITION.

Education and scientific investigation keep spreading intelligence among the people, and yet primitive ideas linger in the mind of the race for many generations. One such notion is the quaint old superstition about the groundhog, that the spring weather can be foretold from the results of his annual excursion from his liar on February 2.

This old notion goes far back of modern history, and is the heritage of a time before scientific discovery.

While modern knowledge laughs at old saws like the groundhog story and considers them a joke, yet they represent the groping effort of primative peoples to learn the facts of life as seen in the world about them. People had sharper eyes then, and could detect many indications that would be hidden to the folks of today. They over-estimated the ability of the groundhog to forecast the weather of early spring, but they were keen observers of the etxernal world, and knew more about nature than the town bred populations of present time

THE TURNING POINT.

It was asserted repeatedly through the illfated discussions of the League of Nations, that article ten was the heart of the league agreement. Mr. Wilson refused to accept any reservations or any amendment which would serve to destroy the force and effect this article. In simplified language, this article proposed to maintain, by the common agreement of all the nations of the civilized world, existing boundaries. The outcries against this article were many. The Irish thought that it meant the maintenance of British control of the island. The Germans thought that it was proposed to perpetuate foreign control of territory hitherto German. Many Americans, who adhered to our old-time national traditions, thought that our acceptance of this article would mean the acknowledgment of a moral obligation to cooperate in a military way in the maintaining of an existing status throughout the world.

What a remarkable shift there has been! The United States rejected the treaty. Ireland has become virtually a self-governing nation. Germany is witnessing the presence of French troops upon German soil for the first time since the Napoleonic era. The nations of the world no longer cooperate. They are farther apart than they were before the war. Yet there arises in the United States a suggestion that the United States should depart from its isolation, and intervene, with a view to saving the nation whose people most devoutly and sincerely feared the operation of article ten. If article ten were effective today there would be no French troops in Germany, and there can be no intervention on the part of the United States unless it is for the purpose of executing and enforcing the principle that was embodied in that article.

It was said many times during the league discussions that the day might come when the pro-leaguers and the irreconcilables would stand upon the same ground. That day is approaching, for no student of world affairs can hold to any other view than that the United States is better isolated than involved in European affairs without mutual guarantees which would protect us as well as all of the nations of the world. If we had subscribed to the doctrines of the league, including article ten, there would have been a mutual obligation which would have protected us. Without the stipulations of the league covenant, binding all nations, we cannot act, by way of intervention any where, except as we act alone.—Jefferson City Capital News.

France is in about the same position as the business man who hires a lawyer and gets a court judgment against a slow debtor who is judgment proof.

The number of bills introduced in the legislature to regulate the railroads indicates that the country is getting back to normalcy.

A Kansas sheriff with a large number of witnesses to be served with subpoenas hit upon a novel scheme to make quick work of it. He rang the fire bell and of course everybody came out to the fire and were served with notices to appear in court.

Democrats Fear Butler's Pen

Jefferson City, Feb. 3—Threats are being made by Democratic senators to defeat the confirmation of Asa W. Butler, editor of the Albany Capital, recently appointed state oil inspector at a salary of $3,500 a year. Some of the Democrats express a fear Butler might be used too effectively as a publicity man for the Hyde administration. It appears doubtful sufficient opposition can be lined up to defeat his confirmation.

Mutz, conductor and French harp soloist; Ray Masters, snare drum; Raymond Jones, Kettel drum; Leroy Jones, bass drum; Guy Mutz, tin lid cymbals; and Jim Evans, fine comb harmonica. Their costumes were quite elaborate and unique which added greatly to the success of this enterprising musical troup. The usual street fair attractions were much in evidence, such as Ego, the snake eater; free throws at the clown's nose; balloons, whistles, candy canes, etc. Matilda Sudds, impersonated by Miss Aline Greeson, was assisting her aged mother, enacted by Alfred Jones, in seeing the sights. The customary motley of boys and girls followed the band, and all were loath to see the street fair come to an end. Progressive rook was played, the one having high score at each table receiving a Kewpie, which resulted in Mr. and Mrs. Guy Mutz being the proud possessors of twins. A dainty luncheon was served, the hostess being assisted by Miss Aline Greeson and Miss Karle Parker. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. James Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Mutz and son, Walter, J. D. Mutz and daughters, Beulah and Delberta, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jones and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Evans and children, Kenneth and Evelyn, Mrs. French Carter, Misses Grace Fisher, Karle Parker, Aline Greeson and the hosts and children. The club will be entertained next Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Evans, when the hostess will conduct a school in spring millinery.

ENGLAND URGED TO DEVELOP AIR MAIL

AMERICAN SYSTEM CALLED MODEL FOR BRITISH.

TO CONNECT COLONIES

Great Trade Stimulus Would Be Effected Throughout the Empire, Airplane Magnate Thinks.

By Luther A. Huston,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Feb. 3.—Great fleets of airships carrying the royal mails to the remote corners of the British Empire must be developed in the near future if Great Britain is to keep pace with the modern trend, in the opinion of G. Holt Thomas, England's pioneer commercial airplane magnate. The airplane and not the steamship, Thomas believes, must soon form the mail transportation link between England and her overseas possessions.

The pace set by the United States in the development of its air mail service, Thomas asserts, supplies the model England must follow in the establishment of its air mail organization. With the pioneer experience of America to draw upon, coupled with the rapid development of the commercial type of aircraft, establishment of a network of British commercial airlines is not only feasible, Thomas is convinced, but is a natural development that must come within a very few years.

Suitable for Mail.

Although the transportation of mails by airship is not common in England or on the Continent at the present time, Thomas believes that it is in the direction of mail services that the future of commercial aviation lies.

"The development of aviation must be in the direction of mail services," Thomas said in an interview, "for which it is the most suitable form of transportation, owing to the necessity for high speed and quick delivery.

"In this respect the United States is to be congratulated on having established the first great lines devoted to the carriage of mails. It is true that America is a country of great distances, in which the airplane shows up to advantage; but Great Britain, although not possessing suitable distances within the confines of the British Isles, possesses within the British Empire the greatest field for the development of air mails.

Link Up Empire.

"The time taken for letters, for instance, from London to India, Australia, et cetera, could be reduced by one-tenth by air transportation, and it is hoped that great British imperial air lines will have due consideration and be founded in due course."

The commercial advantage of air mail transportation, Thomas pointed out, would be tremendous. With Great Britain increasingly dependent upon trade with her colonies for the prosperity of the nation, the carrying of mails to India and Australia in one-tenth of the present time would result in greatly increased trade facilities and act as a wonderful stimulus to commercial relations between the dominions and the home country.

TO TEACH MAIDS HOW TO BE NICE

LOOSENESS OF DEPORTMENT CAUSED BY THE WAR.

GULP AND GOBBLE FOOD

Chicago Y. W. C. A. Plans to Aid Young Women in Effort to Ban Rudeness.

By Roland Krebs,

Chicago, Feb. 3.—The American people are atrocious aters. They eat with their eyebrows as well as their jaws. They "duck" to meet the brimming fork and gulp, gobble and grab. It must stop.

With personality developed, a girl lacking in beauty can accomplish 100 per cent more than she who is only good to look upon.

Such are the convictions of Miss Irene A. Skinner, director of the "Charm School," which the Chicago Y. W. C. A. opened recently. Ninety-nine of each 100 applying for tuition, said Miss Skinner, are actuated by self-consciousness. Girls, reacting from the rudeness and vulgarities of the "flapper," are fearful of losing those little niceties which make for charm, she explained. The looseness of deportment bred by the war has penetrated most markedly into the ranks of the rich, particularly their children, and even among the clergy.

"There is no set rule for a girl acquiring 'charm,' " said Miss Skinner "The conventions must be followed. I hope to strike a medium between the boldness of the 'flapper' and the 'primness' of the other extreme.

"One of the things that suffocate charm is the tendency of persons to be agreeable and polite by 'yessing' one another to death. That word 'yes' is the cause of so much dullness in conversation. One should never answer just 'Yes' or 'No.' The reply should be 'Yes, but—' or 'No, and—' In that way conversation is tossed back and forth like a ball and does not die.

"Our bad manners are on display at the table. The universal vice is eating too fast. And would you believe that in this day and age 'nice people' still leave their spoons in their cups?

"The essence of politeness and charm is unchanged through centuries. Swift's definition of good manners still holds—to make those about us feel at ease.

"We are in too great a hurry. We say 'Pardon my wet glove,' instead of taking it off.

"At the end of this class year we shall have a reception to 'show off' what we have learned. Intellegent appreciation of kindly deeds is one solution. The other is the dynamic within the static."

"OLD, OLD STORY" WAS BIG SUCCESS

WESTMINSTER GUILD GIVE UNIQUE RELIGIOUS SERVICE

HUNDREDS TURNED AWAY

Half Hour Before Program Started at Empire Last Night, All Seats Were Taken.

An innovation in the way of impressive religious services was presented to an overflowing house at the Empire Theatre last night when the Westminster Guild of the First Presbyterian Church gave its program, "The Old, Old Story," in living reproductions of the great masters. Every one of the nineteen numbers was a vivid picturization of a great artists conception of Biblical characters. The detail work of each picture's setting and costuming reflected careful study of the artist's masterpiece. The music or Bible verses, that accompained each picture, added much to the impressiveness and solemnity of the services

The idea as carried out in last night's program was entirely original. It was compiled by Mrs. Geo. H. Colbert and a committee of the Guild. Much time was spent in this work and that of gathering, and making the costumes, and preparing scenic effects. Mrs. Colbert directed the production.

The Rev. S. P. Allison, in opening the services, remained the audience that for the evening the building was a church. "This is a service of worship," he said, "and not an entertainment, and to make it most helpful, please refrain from applause during or after the program." Half an hour before the program opened every seat in the theatre was taken and chairs were brought in, but many people lined the sides, both upstairs and down, and stood throughout the production.

The opening tableau showed Mrs. T. J. Eagle and children, the mother telling them "The Old, Old Story," while a chorus, hidden from view, and accompanied by an organ, sang the song of the same name. It would be hard to attempt to pick the best numbers, but those which seemed to be outstanding in their impressiveness were "Abraham and Isaac," by D. E. Hotchkin and Ford Bradley, after artist Margatson; "Moses in the Bulrushes," by Mrs. F. W. White, Lorena Gult, Catherine Harrison, Miriam Gray and Katherine Gray, after the artist Dore: "The Holy Family," by Fred French, Ruth Fisher, Mrs. L. A. Richman, Mr. Hotchkin, and Lucy Allen, by the artist Bouguerean; "The Boy Christ in the Temple," by Charmion Murray, D. E. Hotchkin, Roy Lippman, F. S. King, and Karl Zimmerman after Hofmann; "The Empty Tomb," by Miss Lucile Brumbaugh, Mrs. Karl Zimmerman, Mrs. N. C. Case, and Mrs. Williard Nixson, after Plockhorst; "Madonna of the Chair, by Mrs. W. F. Phares and daughter, Frances, and Paul Person, after Raphael; "The Praying Samuel," by Paul Person after Reynolds; Murillo's Madonna," by Mrs. C. P. Fryer, and the closing tableau, "Rock of Ages," depicted by Miss Neva Sage.

Quartet music was given with some of the numbers by Mrs. F. P. Robinson, Mrs. A. F. Harvey, Emery Airy and L. A. Richman. Miss Nell Hudson was the reader of the Biblical passages from her position in the balcony. It is estimated conservatively that two or three hundred people were turned away, and that seven or eight hundred crowded into the theatre to see the program.

Many requests have been made for another showing of the pictures, by those who were unable to see them last night.

Intense Indignation at Essen When German School Girl is Shot—Accidental Says Commander

Berlin, Feb. 5.—No official confirmation had been received here up to noon today from Mayence that nine Germans had been killed by French soldiers, and many others wounded, when the troops fired upon a mob that had gathered about a derailed train at Ingelheim.

Intense indignation has been aroused over the news from Essen that a little school girl had been killed by a French corporal. The French commander informed German officials that the shooting was accidental and that the corporal would be courtmartialed.

CHRISTIANS TALK OF A NEW CHURCH

BOARD YESTERDAY ADOPTS RESOLUTION OF COMMITTEE.

TO START INVESTIGATION

President Goforth Will Appoint Committee to Investigate the Situation—Church Growing.

Agitation has been started in the congregation of the First Christian Church for the erection of a new church edifice to take care of the fast growing needs of the church. The committee of the church, appointed to report on a program for the church for the coming year, completed its work and presented its suggested program. This program was submitted at the mid-week meeting last Wednesday and yesterday was adopted by the church board. The next move now towards a new building will be the appointment of a committee by W. E. Goforth, president of the board, and the committee will at once start work on investigation, plans, financing, architect consultation and other manners, and then report back to the board.

The following is the portion of the report adopted that deals with the suggested building of a new church:

Regarding our church building and its taking care of our work, your committee wishes to note the following things:

1. All our departments in the Bible school are crowded to the doors, thus making it impossible to render the most efficient service.

2. According to the best methods for Bible school work, all departments should have their separate assembly rooms, with individual class rooms. In our school, the Primary and Junior departments only, have their assembly rooms and these are altogether inadequate, while the other departments are thrown together to get along the best way possible.

3. It is necessary for our Men's class and also the College class during the summer term, to seek quarters outside the heurch building, thus separating them in a large way, from the work of the main school.

4. We have noted further, that we have lost and are continuing to lose many of our young people, especially the boys, soon after graduating them into the Intermediate department. Two causes for this have been given, which are, inadequate room and lack of leaders and teachers.

5. It is the conviction of your committee that perhaps the greatest reason for this lack of efficient teachers is the fact that there is very little equipment with which to work and no adequate place for them to carry on their class work. Any leader with a vision would reluctantly accept such a responsibility as teaching a Sunday school class when the success of such an undertaking seems so hopeless at the beginning.

6. There has been a conviction in the hearts of our church people for years that a new and improved church building was needed and this conviction has grown with the years as the magnitude of our work has increased. While there has been much discussion of this needed improvement in our work, and our board has officially decided that it is an enterprise that must be launched, your committee notes with much regret that no definite steps have ever been taken in that direction.

For the reasons here stated, and further because we believe that our church has come to a critical period in its history when it must either go forward with more room, or go backward, your committee wishes to recommend that definite steps be taken at once looking toward the erection of a church building that will adequately take care of the rapidly growing membership in our church and Bible school.

WAR CLOUDS LOOM IN THE NEAR EAST

ATHENS AND CONSTANTINOPLE PREPARE FOR WAR

MORE BRITISH WARSHIPS

Are Sent to Turkish Waters—Lord Curzon Meets Hastily Called Session of Cabinet

Malta, Feb. 5—Three British warships sailed today to reinforce the British fleet in the Turkish waters.

London, Feb. 5—A cabinet meeting hastily called for 6:30 this afternoon to discuss the near East crisis. Lord Curzon, foreign secretary, who arrived here this afternoon from Lausanne, has prepared a report on the breakdown of the near East peace negotiations.

London, Feb. 5.—Menacing clouds of war hangs low over the near East today as a result of the collapse of the Lausanne peace treaty due to the refusal of the Turks to sign the peace treaty.

Advices from Athens and Constantinople say that both are renewing their preparations for war, and movement of troops are reported. Great Britain is prepared for any eventualities in the near East if Turkey carries out its threats of hostilities, for most of the British fleet and a big military force is massed there. The general impression seems to be that Great Britain will "sit tight and await developments."

There will be no move in any direction until the return of Lord Curzon, foreign minister, and the convening of the Parliament next week. Newspapers have warned of the possibilities of an early outbreak, but it is thought that Premier Bonar Law and his advisers would make further concessions rather than risk participation in near East hostilities. Despite the warlike preparation of Great Britain in Eastern waters, those in close touch with the situation say that the present British government, even with the possibility of its downfall, will withdraw from Constantinople and Mosul rather than incur war.

BRIGHTEN HOME WORKSHOPS

Ventilation and Light Work Wonders in Gloomy Kitchen.

Sometimes a marvelouse change can be made in an uncomfortable kitchen by having enough windows in the right place. This fact will be demonstrated in the kitchens of many farm women who will take part in the Missouri Kitchen Improvement Contest now being conducted by the Missouri Agricultural Extension Service. Ventilation is necessary for the comfort of the worker, and to get rid of odors and steam. It is desirable to have cross ventilation. If windows cannot be placed on opposite walls a transom over the door will permit of ventilation in the winter as well as summer. When the entire window is screened the upper sash can be lowered when such work as canning, breadbaking, ironing, etc, is being done, insuring comfort for the worker without interfering with the work.

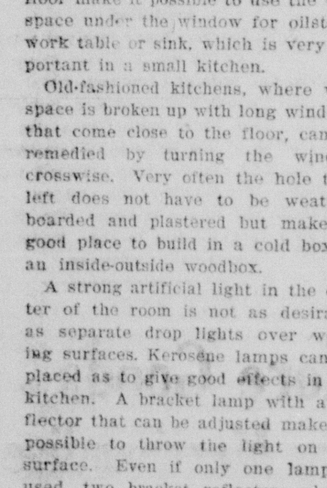
Good light, both daylight and artificial, is needed at the sink and at the work table. The practice of putting windows above the sink is not always a good practice to follow. The north light is the softest light and where there is no reflection of light from a white surface, such as another building, the north window above the sink is satisfactory. The east and west exposures depend upon the time of day when most of the work is to be done in the kitchen. Always avoid a south window over a sink. Windows over each drain board make good light at the sink without the necessity of the worker facing south, east or west lights. Windows that are built 3 1-2 feet from the floor make it possible to use the wall space under the window for oilstove, work table or sink, which is very important in a small kitchen.

Old-fashioned kitchens, where wall space is broken up with long windows that come close to the floor, can be remedied by turning the window crosswise. Very often the hole thus left does not have to be weatherboarded and plastered but makes a good place to build in a cold box or an inside-outside woodbox.

A strong artificial light in the center of the room is not as desirable as separate drop lights over working surfaces. Kerosene lamps can be placed as to give good effects in the kitchen. A bracket lamp with a reflector that can be adjusted makes it possible to throw the light on the surface. Even if only one lamp is used, two bracket reflectors placed on the walls of the kitchen, one where the light can be reflected on the stove an the other on the work table and sink, will make satisfactory light on these surfaces.

Even a little shelf, just big enough for a lamp, near the stove, work table and sink will cast a light on the preparation of many suppers and breakfasts.

Will arrive soon—Car Oil Meal, fine or pea size, $59 a ton, at cost. Wm. Everhart. 2-5



67TH CONGRESS WILL EXPIRE MAR. 4

PROBABLY NO EXTRA SESSION WILL BE CALLED.

WARNS STRICT SILENCE

Greatly Annoyed, It Is Said, by the Senate's Practice of Discussing Foreign Relations.

(Special Correspondence).

Washington, Feb. 5.—The expiration of the 67th Congress on March 4, with nine months intervening before the regular session of the 68th Congress is a prospect that is said to please President Harding and Secretary Hughes, who have been greatly annoyed by the Senate's practice of discussing this country's foreign relations at a time when the administration prefers to maintain strict silence, if not secrecy regarding them.

With this Congress at an end President Harding not only won't encourage but will distinctly depreciate the calling of an extra session of the next, it is understood. While Congress remains in Washington and European conditions continue critical, the Senate is in a position to make the administration's diplomacy the subject of debate and inquiry, and this has been displeasing to the President and particularly to Secretary Hughes.

Once Congress is off the scene and the Senators and Representatives are scattered, the administration will be free to take whatever course Mr. Harding and Mr. Hughes deem best without at the same time giving thought to the need of explanations to the Senate. For the last four or five months the Senate has talked a good deal about American foreign relations, and has centered the people's minds on the subject. While these Senatorial discussions seem to have had little influence on the administration they have at least revealed to the country the want of a continuous, coherent policy on the part of the State Department.

Had there been no session of Congress during the last half year, Senator Borah would have had no such an effective forum as the Senate has furnished him for the discussion of the administration's foreign policy and for proposing a larger initiative and participation by the United States in the affairs of the world. This move of Senator Borah's and the debate and discussion which followed advertised all over the land the administration's lack of plans for helping economic conditions in the United States by contributing to the stabilization of political and financial conditions in Europe.

The outlook is for a more serious turn in the political and economic affairs of Europe, and for correspondingly greater embarrassments for the administration. With the Senate as a spectator and critic of the State Department's diplomatic plays, the administration's plight is aggravated. It is for these reasons, it is said, that President Harding welcomes the close of the present Congress and wishes to delay as long as possible the assembling of another.

Although the President could make his proposed trip to Florida right after the Fourth of March for the benefit of Mrs. Harding's health, and call an extra session of Congress later in the spring, it is understood that he has not abandoned the idea of his proposed trip to Alaska this summer, which would be impossible if Congress were in session.

These calculations do not take into account the effect of spring and summer upon the play boy spirit so often manifested in our Chief Executive.

Fear of giving the country a display of the bitter factionalism among Republican Senators and the desire to save President Harding from the chagrin of seeing his pet measure defeated have thus far prompted the Republican bosses of the Senate to withhold the ship bonus bill from serious consideration, and probably will continue to block its way notwithstanding announcements of a drive to pass it before March 4.

Progressive Republican Senators have left no doubt in the mind of the administration that they will filibuster to kill the bill if it is pressed by the "regulars." It is realized by Mr. Harding's friends in the Senate that a filibuster would reveal to the nation the weaknesses of the Republican leadership in Congress, disclose the extent of the cleavage in the Republican majority, and, if the opposition were successful, greatly diminish the President's prestige.

It is the certainty of the capture and control of the next Congress by the western progressives and radicals who call themselves Republicans that has made the President and his Republican lieutenants in the Senate and the House anxious to avoid a special session of the Sixty-eighth Congress. They want to postpone as long as may be the rebellion that threatens the administration. They hope that the nine months between March and December may produce some change that will allay this radical and progressive hostility.

Practically every farmers' association, all the labor organizations, thousands of small business men, many western editors, including Republicans, and some ship owners are opposing the President's "pet project." Most of these opponents of the bill would be sure to array themselves with Senators Brookhart, La Follette and Norris and against the President while the battle raged in the Senate. Those western Republican Senators who want to befriend the President and support his ship bonus bill foresee the political risk they are taking if they counter the wishes of their constituents. These Senators are in hopes that they will be saved from a choice between disobeying their people and disappointing the President.

In the face of these obvious complications Senator Jones (Rep. Wash.) has been making only a perfunctory effort to obtain a vote on the bill. He has heard a good deal from the farmers and Republican editors of his state, and he hopes that his championship of the proposal to pay bonuses to the Shipping Trust while denying assistance to the farmers has done him much political damage. It is known that Senator Jones has been very glad of the opportunity to sidetrack the President's favorite measure to make way for agricultural credits and other farm legislation.

If the ship bonus bill fails of enactment in this Congress and there is no fair prospect of its adoption—it will have no chance for passage by the next Congress. The Republicans will have only a slight majority and no effective control of legislation in either branch of the Sixty-eighth Congress. The foes of President's ship bonus bill will be much more numerous and powerful in the next Congress than they are in the present. They are confidently expected to be making constant trouble for the administration during the early months of 1924—on the eve of a Presidential election.

MUCH MYSTERY SURROUNDS DEATH OF INDIANA GIRL

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 5.—Investigation today sought to pierce the veil of mystery that surrounds the death of Miss Esther Beck, daughter of Dr. James K. Beck, a former professor of the University of Indiana. Miss Beck was found yesterday in a clump of bushes, eight miles from her home, and died shortly afterwards. The police admit that they are mystified. Some are of the theory that she might have wandered away from home and died from exposure. Many students of the University helped in the search. The girl was found by Paul Reed on his farm. There were no marks of violence on the body.

The Man Of Vision.

The man of vision distinguished from other toilers in a business or profession, by one faculty: he is never in doubt as to results. He is never forced to improvise ways and means to meet unexpected results; the results and effects of his every thought, word, and act are always foreseen. He visions the finished work, and each step of the way unfolded as he becomes ready for it.

The man of vision is a man of principle, and a man of principle knows that the law of life, the law of living is as infallible in its effects and results as the law of numbers, or the law of chemistry, or the law of physics. He reasons from cause to effect, and he knows that if his thoughts and words and deeds are inspired by love and good will for his fellow man, by a spirit of giving and of service, they will invariably produce effects filled with joy, happiness, and prosperity. in turn, these effects become causes which bring forth greater realizations and achievements.—Dion Martinez in The Chirstian Business Man for February.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

"THE PRISON POET"

"WHO wrote this poem?"

Judge John W. Willis of St. Paul, Minn., turned to his secretary one day early in 1910 and, pointing to a verse which appeared in an issue of the paper published by the prisoners of the St. Paul penitentiary, bade the other read what he termed "one of the best bits of poetry I have come across in many a day"—a fragment of which ran:

Haggard faces and trembling knees,
Eyes that shine with a weakling's gate,
Lips that mutter their blasphemies,
Murderous hearts that darkly wait;
These were they who were men of late,
Fit to hold a plough or a sword.
If a prayer this wall will penetrate,
Have pity on these, my comrades, Lord!

Interested in the psychology which could give birth to such lines written behind the bars of a penitentiary, Judge Willis made a point of visiting the prison, where he found a man entered upon the prison books as "John Carter, age 24," but who admitted that both the name and age were false. When questioned as to his true name he would only reply: "I have too much pride to allow that to be known" and, with respect to his age, he merely pointed to his gray hairs and smiled.

Carter had been sentenced to ten years in prison for burglary, but when Judge Willis commenced to investigate his case, he found that the man had had nothing to eat for two days prior to his crime, and that he had broken into a railway restaurant with the sole idea of obtaining enough food to save himself from starvation, after being thrown from a freight train while trying to beat his way from Winnipeg to St. Paul.

Shortly after entering the prison "Carter" had commenced to play the organ in a manner which attracted the instant attention of a music teacher in St. Paul, who declared that he possessed exceptional ability, and he also contributed a number of poems to the prison paper—poems which had not only led Judge Willis but a number of editors throughout the country to an appreciation of the genius of this convict-author. His "Ballad of Misery and Iron," which was widely quoted in various sections of the United States and Canada at the time, and of which the verse above forms a part, concludes with the remarkable stanza:

Poets sing of life at the lees
In tender verses and delicate
Of tears and manifold agonies.
Little they know of what they prate.
Out of this silence passionate
Sounds a deeper, a wilder chord.
If song be heard through the narrow gate,
Have pity on these, my comrades, Lord!

But, as Judge Willis founud, "Carter" was not a man who whined or complained. He admitted his crime and declared that the law had sentenced him justly, and that he was perfectly willing to work out the remaining half of his term. A movement for pardon was instituted, however, and, within a year, the prison gates opened and "John Carter" was once more a free man. As he stepped out the warden asked if he would not write something descriptive of the way he felt. "Carter" hesitated a moment and then replied:

"Lead me back to my cell. I must have the iron bars in front of me."

A few moments later he stepped out, a poem completed, the final lines of which read:

Unreal it seems,
Half ecstasy, half weariness and pain
For so I fear this haven of my dreams
Shall vanish and the storm come back again."

"Who are you?" asked one of the group of reporters who had gathered to witness the release of the prison poet. But Carter, his face grim, his eyes fixed firmly on the world which he was viewing for the first time in five years, answered:

"That is my secret. Possibly you may hear from me in the future."

It is more than possible that the world has heard from him, for genius such as that of Carter's cannot be hidden by a pseudonym any more than it can be confined by the walls of a prison.

Brains!
Cause of our progress and source of our gains;
Helping the forces of nature to shape
Man—from the clay of the anthropoid ape.
Brains—that from misty beginnings of time
Lived as the spirit that quickens the clod,
Lifting us evermore out of the slime
Further from animal, nearer to God.

Brains!
Framer of destinies, breaker of chains;
Brains that have ceaselessly fashioned and wrought
Miracles vaster than alchemist sought,
Leading men onward and making them free,
Hitching realities fast to a star;
Patiently sculpturing What Ought to Be,
Out of the granite of Things as They Are!

Brains!
Conquering mountains and oceans and plains,
Fount of the dreams that go ever before
Deserts that blossom and cities that roar;
Brains that have dauntlessly battled with Fate
Taming her fury, however she strove,
Making of Man a collossus elate,
Armed with the mightiest thunders of Jove!
Brains!
Wealth that endures when all other wealth wanes;
Touchstone of fortune in which men may trust
When all material treasures are dust.
Brains that have moulded us out of the brute
Taught us that beauty and joy are on earth,
Who will evalue them? Who will compute
Just what a thing that is priceless is worth?

THE REV. COOPER ADDRESSES HIGH SCHOOL ASSEMBLY TODAY

The Rev. J. A. Cooper gave a talk on "The Activity Hour" at an assembly held at the high school, this morning. He emphasized the fact that a literary or reading club should be established, especially among the boys. This, he said, is as important as athletics, and the students need training in reading and speaking. A time will come when oratorical and debating contests will be just as important an activity as basketball or football, declared Mr. Cooper.

Patriotic songs were sung at the assembly, under the direction of Mrs. St. Clair.

Avenues of Service

REGINALD McKENNA, head of the largest bank in the world, says that "Splendid isolation is a dream;" a truth which every industrial leader accepts as axiomatic. Had he substituted monopoly for isolation he would have expressed another self-evident truth which would have been acclaimed by every man who has given serious thought to the development of business on a large scale.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is a big business striving to do a big job in a big way, yet no thought is given to achieving a monopoly: for those who direct the Company's activities know that in any basic industry such an ambition is impossible of fulfillment. Competition is welcome, for no single organization can hope to serve the people of the Middle West with petroleum products as they should be served. The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) enjoys a large volume of business and is satisfied to let this volume take care of its profits.

There is a reciprocal bond between every great industrial organization and the social environment in which it operates. An organization is truly great only when the service it renders is great.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is in daily contact with a community of about 30 million people.

It serves them through a host of useful products refined from petroleum. Through these products it touches the home and industrial life of the people. It enters the sick chamber with mineral oil and petroleum jelly. It enters the factory, the roundhouse, and the farmyard with lubricating oils for machines, engines, and tractors. It seeks the farm home with gasoline, kerosene, candles and parowax. It touches the railroad right of way with Fortnite Long Time Burner Oil for signal lamps; it supplies thousands of public and private garages with gasoline and lubricants. It feeds the furnaces of homes and factories with Stanolind Furnace Oil. It goes to the hospital with Stanolind Surgical Wax. It paves the streets with Stanolind Paving Asphalt.

These are but a few of the avenues of service which the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) maintains To keep these avenues open the Company operates 1700 service stations, 3900 bulk stations, 7000 tank wagons serving thousands of garages, and 6 great refineries to supply their needs.

Thus does the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) acknowledge its reciprocal bond, and by creating a host of useful, essential products from a single basic raw material—crude petroleum—justify its claim to master craftsmanship in industrial husbandry.

And Yet a Fool

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

THE exchanges that come to a country newspaper like ours become familiar friends as the years pass. One who reads these papers regularly comes to know them even in their wrappers, though to an unpracticed eye the wrappers seem much alike. But when he has been poking his thumb through the paper bunks in a certain pile every morning for a score of years, he knows by some sort of prescience when a new paper appears; and, when the pile looks odd to him, he goes hunting for the stranger and is not happy until he has found it.

One morning this spring the stranger stuck its head from the bottom of the exchange pile, and when we glanced at the handwriting of the address and at the one-cent stamp on the cover we knew it had been mailed to us by someone besides the publisher. For the newspaper "hand" is as definite a form of writing as the legal hand or the doctor's. The paper proved to be an Arizona newspaper full of saloon advertising, restaurant cards, church and school meeting notices, local items about the sawmill and the woman's club, land notices and paid items from wool dealers. On the local page in the midst of a circle of red ink was the announcement of the death of Horace P. Sampson. Every month we get notices like this, of the deaths of old settlers who have gone to the ends of the earth, but this notice was peculiar in that it said:

"One year ago our lamented townsman deposited with the firm of Cross & Kurtz, the popular undertakers and dealers in Indian goods and general merchandise, $100 to cover his funeral expenses, and another hundred to provide that a huge boulder be rolled over his grave on which he desired the following unusual inscription: 'Horace P. Sampson, Born Dec. 6, 1840, and died ——. And is not this a rare fellow, my lord? He's good at anything and yet a fool.'"

We handed the paper to Alphabetical Morrison, who happened to be in the office at the time, pawing through the discarded exchanges in the waste-basket, looking for his New York Sun, and, after Colonel Morrison had read the item, he began drumming with his fingernails on the chair seat between his knees. His eyes were full of dreams and no one disturbed him as he looked off into space. Finally he sighed:

"And yet a fool—a motley fool! Poor old Samp—kept it up to the end! I take it from the guarded way the paper refers to his faults, 'as who of us have not,' that he died of the tremens or something like that." The colonel paused and smiled just perceptibly, and went on: "Yet I see that he was a good fellow to the end. I notice that the Shriners and the Elks and the Eagles and the Hoo-hoos buried him. Nary an insurance order in his! Poor old Samp; he certainly went all the gaits!"

We suggested that Colonel Morrison write something about the deceased for the paper, but though the colonel admitted that he knew Sampson "like a book," there was no persuading Morrison to write the obituary.

"After some urging and by way of compromise," he said, "I'm perfectly willing to give you fellows the facts and let you fix up what you please."

Because the reporters were both busy we called the stenographer, and had the colonel's story taken down as he told it—to be rewritten into an obituary later. And it is what he said and not what we printed about Sampson that is worth putting down here. The colonel took the big leather chair, locked his hands behind his head, and began:

"Let me see. Samp was born, as he says, December 6, 1840, in Wisconsin, and came out to Kansas right after the war closed. He was going to college up there, and at the second call for troops he led the whole senior class into forming a company, and enlisted before graduation and fought from that time on till the close of the war. He was a captain, I think, but you never heard him called that. When he came here he'd been admitted to the bar and was a good lawyer—a mighty good lawyer for that time—and had more business 'n a bird pup with a gum-shoe. He was just a boy then, and, like all boys, he enjoyed a good time. He drank more or less in the army—they all did 's far as that goes, but he kept it up in a desultory way after he came here, as a sort of accessory to his main business of life, which was being a good fellow.

"And he was a good fellow—an awful good fellow. We were all young then; there wasn't an old man on the town site as I remember it. We used to load up the whole bunch and go hunting—closing up the stores and taking the girls along—and did not show up till midnight. Samp would always have a little something to take under his buggy seat, and we would wet up and sing coming home.

"He made a lot of money and blew it in at Jim Thomas' saloon, buying drinks, playing stud poker, betting on quarter horses, and lending it out to fellows who helped him forget they'd borrowed it. And—say in two or three years, after the chicken hunting set had married off, and begun in a way to settle down—Samp took up with the next set coming on; he married and got the prettiest girl in town. We always thought that he married only because he wanted to be a good fellow and did not wish to be impolite to the girl he'd paired off with in the first crowd. Still he didn't stay home nights, and once or twice a year—say, election or Fourth of July—he and a lot of other young fellows would go out and tip over all the board sidewalks in town, and paint funny signs on the store buildings and stack beer bottles on the preacher's front porch, and raise Ned generally. And the fellows of his age, who owned the stores and were in nights, would say to Samp when they saw him coming down about noon the next day:

"'Go it when you're young, Samp, for when you're old you can't.' And he would wink at 'em, give 'em ten dollars apiece for their damages and jolly his way down the street to his office.

"Now, you mustn't get the idea that Samp was the town drunkard, for he never was. He was just a good fellow. When the second set of young fellows outgrew him and settled down, he picked up with the third, and his wife's brown alpaca began to be noticed more or less among the women. But Samp's practice didn't seem to fall off—it only changed. He didn't have so much real estate lawing and got more criminal practice. Gradually he became a criminal lawyer, and his fame for wit and eloquence extended over all the state.

Colonel Morrison chuckled and crossed his fat legs at the ankles as he continued, after lighting the cigar we gave him:

"Well, along in the late seventies we fellows that he started out with got to owning our own homes and getting on in the world. That was the time when Samp should have been grubbing at his law books, but nary a grub for him. He was playing horse for dear life. And right there the fellows all left him behind. Some were buying real estate for speculation; some running for office; some starting a bank; and others lending money at two per cent a month, and leading in the prayer meeting. So Samp kind of hitched up his ambition and took the slack out of his habits for a few months and went to the legislature. They say that he certainly did have a good time, though, when he got there. They remember that session yet up there, and call it the year of the great flood, for the nights, they were filled with music, as the poet says, and from the best accounts we could get the days were devoid of ease also and how Mrs. Sampson stood it we never could find out, for, of course, she must have known all about it, though he wouldn't let her come near Topeka. He began to get pursy and red faced, and was clicking it off with his fifth set of young fellows. It took a big slug of whisky to set off his oratory, but when he got it wound up he surely could pull the feathers out of the bird of freedom to beat scandalous. But as a stump speaker you weren't always sure he'd fill the engagement. He could make a jury blubber and clench his fist at the prosecuting attorney, yet he didn't claim to know much law, and he did turn over all the work in the Supreme court to his partner, Charley Hedrick. Then, when Charley was practicing before the Supreme court and wasn't here to hold him down, Samp would get out and whoop it up with the boys, quote Shakespeare and make stump speeches on dry goods boxes at midnight.

"Where was I?" asked Colonel Morrison of the stenographer when she had finished sharpening her pencil. "Oh, yes, along in the eighties came the boom, and Samp tried to get in it and make some money. He seems to have tried to catch up with us fellows of his age, and he began to plunge. He got in debt, and, when the boom broke, he was still living in a rented house with the rent ten months behind; his partnership was gone and his practice was cut down to joint keepers, gamblers, and the farmers who hadn't heard the stories of his financial irregularities that were floating around town.

"Yet his wife stuck to him, forever explaining to my wife that he would be all right when he settled down. But he continued to soak up a little—not much, but a little. He never was drunk in the daytime, but I remember there used to be mornings when his office smelled pretty sour. I had an office next to his for a while and he used to come in and talk to me a good deal. The young fellows around town whom he would like to run with were beginning to find him stupid, and the old fellows—except me—were busy and he had no one to loaf with. He decided, I remember, several times to brace up, and once he kept white shirts, cuffs and collars on for nearly a year. But when Harrison was elected, he filled up from his shoes to his hat and didn't go home for three days. One day after that, when he had gone back to his flannel shirts and dirty collars, he was sitting in my office looking at the fire in the box stove when he broke out with:

"'Alphabetical—what's the matter with me anyway? This town sends men to congress; it makes Supreme court judges of others. It sends fellows to Kansas City as rich bankers. It makes big merchants out of grocery clerks. Fortune just naturally flirts with everyone in town, but never a wink do I get. I know and you know I'm smarter than those jays. I can teach your congressman economics, and your Supreme judge law. I can think up more schemes than the banker, and can beat the merchant in any kind of a game he'll name. I don't lie and I don't steal and I ain't stuck up. What's the matter with me, anyway?'

"And of course," mused Colonel Morrison as he relighted the butt of his cigar, "of course I had to lie to him and say I didn't know. But I did. We all knew. He was too much of a good fellow. His failure to get on bothered him a good deal, and one day he got roaring full and went up and down town telling people how smart he was. Then his pride left him, and he let his whiskers grow frowsy and used his vest for a spittoon, and his eyes watered too easily for a man still in his forties.

"He went West a dozen years ago, about the time of Cleveland's second election, expecting to get a job in Arizona and grow up with the country. His wife was mighty happy, and she told our folks and the rest of the women that when Horace got away from his old associates in this town she knew that he would be all right. Poor Myrtle Kenwick, the prettiest girl you ever saw along in the sixties—and she was through here not long ago and stayed with my wife and the girls—a broken old woman, going back to her kinfolk in Iowa after she left him. Poor Myrtle! I wonder where she is. I see this Arizona paper doesn't say anything about her."

Colonel Morrison read over the item again, and smiled as he proceeded:

"But it does say that he occupied many places of honor and trust in his former home in Kansas, which seems to indicate that whisky made old Samp a liar as well as a loafer at last. My, my!" sighed the colonel as he rose and put the paper on the desk. "My, my! What a treacherous serpent it is! It gave him a good time—literally a hell of a good time. And he was a good fellow—literally a damned good fellow—'damned from here to eternity,' as your man Kipling says. God gave him every talent. He might have been a respected, useful citizen; no honor was beyond him; but he put aside fame and worth and happiness to play with whisky. My Lord, just think of it!" exclaimed the colonel as he reached for his hat and put up his glasses. "And this is how whisky served him: brought him to shame, wrecked his home, made his name a by-word, and lured him on and on to utter ruin by holding before him the phantom of a good time. What a pitiful, heartbreaking mocker it is!" He sighed a long sigh as he stood in the door looking up at the sky with his hands clasped behind him, and said half audibly as he went down the steps: "And whose is deceived thereby is not wise—not wise. He's good at anything—and yet a fool!"

That was what Colonel Morrison gave the stenographer. What we made for the paper is entirely uninteresting and need not be printed here.

"Alphabetical—What's the Matter With Me, Anyway?"

PARENTS SEND SON TO PRISON

WAYWARD YOUTH SCORNED ADVICE OF FATHER AND MOTHER

2 YEARS FOR FORGERY

Drew Checks on Father and Persisted In Selecting Bad Company—Case Made in Kansas City

By Douglas G. Tinsley.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 3.—They stood in the almost deserted courtroom—the four members of a little family—while one of the strangest scenes that ever took place within the walls of a courthouse was enacted. For a father and mother were sending their boy to the penitentiary—"for his own salvation," they told the court.

Clarie Branson, 19 years old, today behind the grim walls of the Missouri penitentiary, serving a two-year sentence for forging his father's name to two checks.

Law Invoked.

Over and over again he visualizes the scene in the Jackson County Criminal Court, when his father and mother turned him over to the law. On one side of him stood his father, sad-faced and with downcast eyes; on the other his gray-haired mother, the wells of her faded eyes dried up after years of weeping over the waywardness of her "baby." Behind him, as he faced the judge, was an older brother, who had spent many sleepless nights searching for the prodigal who would not remain at home.

"Here is our boy, to whom we cannot be father and mother. He is our youngest, and we have failed. Take him," the parents said to the law. And the law took him. Almost from infancy Claire had been willful and headstrong. When he grew toward manhood time and again he forged the name of his father to check after check. He got into other trouble and preferred the companionship of criminals and dissolute characters to the society of his parents and the comfortable home they provided for him. Again and again the father reasoned with the boy, while the mother, red eyed from weeping, pleaded with him to abandon his evil associations. The youth turned a deaf ear to all pleas. Finally, again he forged his father's name to two checks totalling $20.

Parents Helpless.

In the quiet of their home, while the boy ran the streets, the parents communed together and decided that to save him from himself and break the influence that was about him they would send him to prison.

"We've done the best we could for him," the mother said. "We feel that he can't have any worse associates where he is going than he has had."

So the father swore out a warrant against his own son, and he was arrested. Defiantly the boy pleaded guilty when arraigned and was sentenced to the "gray, grim walls."

A minute later the boy had been led away. His parents and brother quietly left the courtroom. Throughout the ordeal they had not spoken and had not shown any outward sign of emotion. But in the hallway the mother's eyes filled with tears. After all, he was her "baby," and the law had taken him.

Miss Ford Leaves.

Miss Alice Ford left Friday morning for her home in Dulce, New Mexico, after a week's visit in Maryville with her mother, Mrs. J. S. Ford. En route home she stopped in Kansas City for a brief visit.

Isaac Jones of Maitland, who has been spending several days at the home of his brother, George Jones, on South Market street, will go to Stanberry tomorrow to visit relatives.

Tom DeWitt of Green City, Mo., will speak Wednesday night at the Long Branch school, one mile west of Orrsburg, under the auspices of the Farmers Club.

Produce Review.

The value of cold storage to the producers of the country is strikingly shown in report of the United States Department of Commerce and Labor, issued on January 29. Commenting on conditions in Mexico, the report says that approximately forty carloads of eggs a month were shipped into Mexico City during 1922.

"The logical explanation for the increasing demand for storage eggs is underproduction and lack of storage facilities," the report says. "Mexico has no produce storage warehouses and cannot conserve its excess distribution when production lessens."

The value of the cold storage warehouse in the United States has never been fully appreciated, but its value to the industry is shown during the early spring months, when there is such tremendous excess over consumptive requirements of eggs, the surplus being stored for use later in the year, when production is extremely light.

Receipts of eggs at the principal markets of the country indicate that production is increasing over a vast area and prices are lower, both in consuming and shipping centers.

Due to favorable weather conditions and larger flocks of fowl on the farm, increased receipts are looked for, with gradual settling of prices until they reach a storage basis.

During the week, one of the occasional abrupt declines in the butter market occurred. The Chicago market on 90 score Standards was quoted at 45½ on February 2, as compared with 48 cents, a week ago.

In our two previous reviews, we called attention to the comparison of values this year and last.

With more butter reaching the market than was being consumed, is was inevitable that some adjustment would occur to stimulate the demand from the consuming trade. Production is larger than last year by at least 20 per cent, and more than makes up for the decrease in storage stocks.

So far, the receipts of both live and dressed poultry reaching the four great markets have been heavier than last year.

The U. S. Dept. of Agriculture in a report of February 1 shows stocks of poultry in storage as follows, in Chicago, New York, Boston and Philadelphia:

This Year	83,290,000 lbs.
Last Year	71,858,000 lbs.
Excess	11,432,000 lbs.

The market trend indicates lighter receipts as the younger roosters are pretty well marketed, and on account of egg production, fowl are being held back for the laying season. The lighter movement, if continued, will probably result in higher prices being made at country collecting points.

Spring Advertising Best.

How many advertisers ever take into serious consideration the fact that people's reading habits vary according to the season? I don't mean that we are more likely to read about umbrellas during a rainy season than when the weather is bright and clear, but am referring to reading habits much less obvious.

To begin with, one might think that most reading would be done at the season when the days are shortest and the evenings correspondingly long. If that were true, public library records would show the big reading months to be December and January. But that is not according to the facts. More books are taken from public libraries in late February and the early part of March than in December.

The explanation seems to be that during the season of slush, when it is too late for winter sports and too early for spring activities, reading is about all there is to do. I should rather run certain kinds of advertising then than at any other time. Library records show a demand for much seasonal reading that cannot easily be accounted for. People read far more genealogy in the spring than in the fall, but more astrology in the fall than in the spring. Why? That's just the question: Why?

Conceivably, there may be advertising more potent in the spring or in the fall, even when no reason is evident.—Fred Kelly in The Nation's Business.

M. H. S. WINS BY A 25 TO 20 SCORE

FROM LAFAYETTE HIGH SATURDAY NIGHT.

TEAM WAS OFF FORM

Game Was Not Interesting From Spectators Point of View. First Meeting Since Tournament Last Year

The Maryville High School basketball team won a poorly played basketball game Saturday on the Maryville court from the Lafayette High School of St. Joseph by a score of 25 to 20. The Maryville team was distinctly off form. They played hard basketball but they just coudn't hit their stride. Had they ever hit the old running form, the score would doubtless have been much larger.

The Lafayette boys were rather inclined to be rough and every player that Coach Murphy put in the game had at least one personal foul called on him. Two men were taken from the game for four personal fouls.

The game Saturday night was the first meeting between the two schools in basketball since the high school tournament last year when Maryville won from Lafayette in the finals for the championship.

Fannon was the individual scoring machine for Maryville, tallying three field goals and eight charity shots. Beaty scored high for Lafayette with four goal for the field.

The game was refereed by Thomas of Tarkio. A good crowd was present.

H. A. MILLER IN EVENING OF DELIGHTFUL READINGS

Audience Listens for Almost Two Hours Without Interruption

(Trenton Republican)

Prof. H. A. Miller, in charge of the department of public speaking at Maryville, gave to his audience last night at the Baptist church, in Trenton, a splendid series of readings which fell on ears which listened very closely. The attentiveness and stillness of the audience made the readings more effective.

The list he selected were remarkably fitting. He opened with the story of "The Other Wise Man," following on with serious and humorous selections. His readings from James Whitcomb Riley were inimitable and every hearer caught the spirit and vision of the Hoosier poet who talked so well and so closely of the every-day things of life.

In all, the readings lasted for about an hour and a half. Miss Elizabeth Brainerds introduced him. At the close Mrs. L. T. Moss sang a solo accompanied by Mrs. Joe Cook on the piano and Miss Frances Harrison on the cello.

Visiting at Kane Home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Langston of Holdenville, Okla., are visiting in Maryville at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry King. Mr. Langston had been in very poor health in Oklahoma, but has been much improved in the two weeks he has been in Maryville and speaks highly of Missouri's climate as compared to Oklahom. He is a former resident of Maryville.

FARM BLOC RULES LEGISLATION

MAJORITY HAS ABDICATED LEADERSHIP TO BLOC

DAILY MEETING HELD

Lower Taxes for Farms, More for City Greater Share of School Funds for Rural Districts

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 5.—With the forty-second general assembly in session exactly one month today, observers have been for more than a week the unusual spectacle of the Democratic majority leadership, for for which so much had been predicted by party enthusiasts, completely abdicated.

Democratic leaders and minority Republicans have completely surrendered to the farm bloc, and the two leaders of the bloc, Bales of Shannon County, Democrat, and Whitaker of Hickory County, Republican.

The house farm bloc a few days ago disrupted the Democratic organization so badly that the few Democratic members outside of the bloc threatened a revolt and virtually forced the resignation of Bales as floor leader. Roney of Jasper County, chairman of the Democratic caucus, did not desire to succeed Bales. The caucus finally elected another member of the bloc, Maxey of Bates County. He is a lawyer and was an active leader of the minority four years ago. Since his election in Bales' place it has been the comment of many legislators and outside observers that he has been "crowded out" by Bales and Whitaker. About the only motion made by Maxey since his election has been the motion to adjourn the house.

Ordinarily the majority floor leader is on his feet directing the debate on party measures and submitting suggestions and amendments. Bales and Whitaker were on the floor constantly before Maxey was elected, and have been a large part of the time since.

How Bloc Rules House.

The situation in the house is this—out of a total membership of 150 between 70 and 80 Democrats and Republicans are either active members of the farm bloc or closely affiliated with it. From 40 to 70 members, farmers, lawyers, country editors and doctors, attend the bloc meeting at 8:30 o'clock every morning in the house lounging room and frequently also in the afternoon. Bales, and usually Whitaker, meet with the bloc. Bales was there when he was Democratic floor leader until Democrats protested. He resumed his attendance after resigning. In these bloc meeting there is discussion of legislation to lower taxation for the farmer, increase it for the cities and to divert as much of the state school fund as possible from the urban schools to the rural schools.

There is no attempt at concealment of the bloc's purposes. The bloc is powerful enough not to face a necessity of concealing its plans.

With from 70 to 80 members of the house, fully half the membership, tied up with the bloc regardless of politics, and other members hanging to the fringe, the balance of the membership consists of about 25 members from St. Louis and Kansas City and legislators, from smaller cities and rural counties who are inexperienced and who follow the two bloc leaders or listen to debates, but take no part.

In the face of this combination Speaker Oak Hunter seems helpless, even though he may inwardly feel disposed to meet it. Hunter at the beginning attempted to control appointment of his own committees, but Bales and the farm bloc dictated the situation and he was forced to yield. Bales insisted on being a member of committees which dominate legislation, although the majority floor leader customarily does not serve on these committees. An example of this took place Thursday night when Bales as a member of the important ways and means committees, virtually condemned to defeat the state forestry bill before forestry experts had completed their pleas for it at the committee hearing.

The speakership, which ordinarily is a large factor in directing legislation by the majority party, has been swamped by the farm bloc the same as the floor leadership. Speaker Hunter's services have been confined to putting motions and declaring them lost or carried. He is without experience in the position.

Bales comes from Shannon County in the Ozarks, which has a population of 11,865. Whitaker comes from Hickory, another Ozark county with 7,033 population. Whitaker's county lost 2,953 population from 1910 to 1920. Lauman County gained 618. These men are directing the legislation for a state with a population of 3,404,055 persons including two cities with a total population of more than a million.

The significance of the situation is that the house has final control over taxation and appropriations.

To Kansas City Market.

Miss Eva Dawson and Miss Goldya Pope went to Kansas City this morning to buy spring merchandise for the Dawson Millinery store. They will be away most of the week.
